Section II.B.2. Cognitive Rehabilitation

1. ADDED language to the General Definition: "The facilitation of recovery from cognitive impairments in order to achieve independence or the highest level of functioning possible. Goals of cognitive rehabilitation include: relearning of targeted mental abilities, strengthening of intact functions, relearning of social interaction skills, substitution of new skills to replace lost functioning, controlling the emotional aspects of one's functioning. Treatment may include techniques such as, auditory and visual attention directed tasks, memory training, training in the use of assistive technology, and anger management. Training can be done through exercises or stimulation, cognitive neuropsychology, cognitive psychology and behavioral psychology, or a holistic approach to include social and emotional aspects. Training is generally provided one-on-one and is highly customized to each individual's strengths, skills, and needs."
2. DELETED language from the General Definition: "Teaching of cognitive skills through verbal, video and computer techniques to address deficits in cognitive and interpersonal functioning."

REPLACE PAGE 49

Section II.B.4. Psychoeducational Services and Ongoing Support to Maintain Employment

1. ADDED "meaningful" to the General Definition: "Psychoeducational services and ongoing support to maintain employment services are designed to assist a person or group to choose, acquire, and maintain a job or other meaningful community activity (e.g., volunteer work)."
2. ADDED language to the end of Service Standards/Provider Qualifications: "Some individuals might not be ready to identify an educational or employment goal, and will need assistance in exploring their strengths as they relate to a variety of goals, eventually identifying an appropriate goal. Some individuals may desire to focus on socialization goals, which should also be addressed in rehabilitation services, and are often the first step to moving towards competitive employment and further independent involvement in the community."
